In today's fast-paced, networked world, children are increasingly faced with new threats; at home, at school, in the community and online. What can you do to protect them? Find out about the latest threats and what can be done to combat them!

The 2008 InfraGard Pittsburgh Safe Schools Conference brings together federal, state and local law enforcement and many non-profit organizations to discuss current and developing cyber and physical safety topics and issues affecting PreK-12 and higher educational institutions, businesses, parents and others that have an impact our nation's youth. The conference will provide valuable information for: school administrators, educators, and counselors (PreK-12); university instructors and students in the education field; business and industry leaders concerned about their organization and today's youth; homeland security, public safety and law enforcement officials; and last but certainly not least – parents.
